

PTPN11

MSA-aligned exon architecture · one primary protein per species

Where do the coding exons of the selected primary proteins fall on a common alignment coordinate, and which exon intervals are matched across species?

A shared column means the residues were aligned, not that they are functionally equivalent. Vertical ticks mark coding-exon ends on the alignment axis.